1. Introduction

The mobile labour market nowadays requires constant upgrading of one's skills and competencies among which foreign languages play a vital role, especially commonly used English and German. People who go abroad to take care of children as their new vocation very often lack any preparation at all, either linguistic or vocational.

Prior to project design we did the Internet research into the materials available for au pairs as well as conducted a survey among potential au pairs on Internet forums. The results indicate that there is a lack of such a training tool and this is why its creation would be greatly beneficial to this target group.

2. Brief description of the project

The aim of the project is creation of a professional 90-hour training course providing practical knowledge about child care both in English and German at an intermediate level.

The project addresses an urgent need for complex and specialised language training of professionals working within childcare environment. The aim of the project is to prepare them to participate in childcare more effectively, by increasing the level of their language competences in the specialised area and understanding children and their parents needs. This modern training tool also creates opportunities for the unemployed to gain new qualifications at their own pace and outside the formal educational system. Besides, receiving a certificate after completing the course will be a significant part of one's CV while looking for job.

So far, there has been no course designed especially for potential au pairs using the CLIL (Content and Language Integrated Learning) approach for this particular target group.

The specific aims of the project are:

- to provide a user-friendly course by developing CDs with both theoretical and language modules which can be done with or without a trainer at one's own pace

- to create opportunities for people who choose taking care of children as their professional career
- to increase the quality of childcare which can have a considerable impact on their upbringing and multicultural awareness of the European society
- to provide a modern training tool for anybody willing to start a new vocational career at any stage of their lives or gain extra qualifications (life-long learning)
- to promote learning English and German as foreign languages in thematic specialised contexts (the CLIL approach)

The project was launched on 15.06.2007 and is planned to finish on 31.03.2008.
